第8回気象レーダー会議開催

The American Meteorological Society has chosen San Francisco as the site for the Eighth Weather Radar Conference to be held in April, 1960.

The announcement was made by Elmer Robinson, president of the Northern California Branch of the Society. The Branch is co-sponsoring the Conference with Stanford Research Institute.

"About 300 leading meteorologists from the U. S. and abroad are expected to attend because of the heightened interest in radar meteorology created by the current Air Force, Weather Bureau and Navy program of installing a nation-wide radar storm detection system," according to Dr. H. G. M. Ligde, Conference Chairman and head of SRI's Radar Aerophysics Group.

Papers will be invited from scientists on such subjects as radar cloud phsics, and the use of radar for weather forecasting, severe storm warning, hydrology and flood warning.
